

WORKPLACE SAFETY NETWORK GROUP

(Incorporated under the Associations Incorporation Act 1984)

ABN 36 521 805 054

C/- 15 Charleston Ave, Earlwood, NSW 2206

The Workplace Safety Network Group is one of several groups established in New South Wales as a means of furthering work health and safety awareness to business. The need to keep abreast of work health and safety matters and legislation is critical to the successful running of any business as the cost of work-related accidents / illnesses and claims, coupled with fines for breaches of legislation, can seriously affect an organisation's viability. The Workplace Safety Network Group endeavors to meet these needs.

The group meets on a monthly basis and generally follows the format of having a guest speaker on some aspect of work health and safety. A short meeting to enable those present to share ideas and be informed of current issues follows this. A problem-sharing segment and an update of the latest work health and safety legislation are key parts of these short meetings. A representative from Kingston Reid and Safe Work NSW is typically present at the meetings in an advisory capacity to present these legislative updates and answer any questions of those attending.

During the month, an email service is provided for members and this allows them to ask questions of, or assistance from, other members. It also allows members to share information with each other.

The group meets at the Revesby Workers' Club. The club is situated at 2b Brett Street, Revesby. The group meets on the second Wednesday of the month at 12.30pm for a light lunch and refreshment and 1.00pm for the meeting. The meeting concludes at 2.00pm typically. During the course of the year the group endeavours to visit one or two sites, instead of the usual meeting, in order to further the knowledge of those attending in work health and safety matters.

For any further information, you are invited to contact me on the number below and we would be pleased to welcome you to a meeting to experience the value that can be gained before any commitment to membership is made.

Yours faithfully
